

Celebrity Endorsements

Peanut the squirrel will become the most famous presidential endorsement (see next page for details). There's a whole gang of the Hollyweirdo's endorsing Harris who are coincidentally on the Diddy and Epstein guest lists. Bette Mudler prescribes drinking Drano because Trump was re-elected.

We do have "one" in the neighborhood. I did refrain from driving back and forth honking my horn. Another neighbor apparently saved fireworks and lit them off. Teenage "person" lives here and there's a "support trans youth" sign and the ironic "don't be weird" sign. Maybe I should replace my flag with a garbage bag or would that be too esoteric for the target audience?

The Frank Report

We have just witnessed a clash of the titans...

11.9.2024 #461

All the news I see fit to print.

Freedom of the press belongs to those who own one.

Soros made his money by destroying people and things. Musk made his money by creating things that would benefit people. Guess who is the richest man in the world.

Soros is coming to an end of his existence and took his last best shot at destroying America. Don't know why. It's just what he does. That shot was at the legal system by "hiring" every government attorney he could and getting them elected to positions where they could do the most harm. That ultimate harm was to capture the presidency to do the most damage.

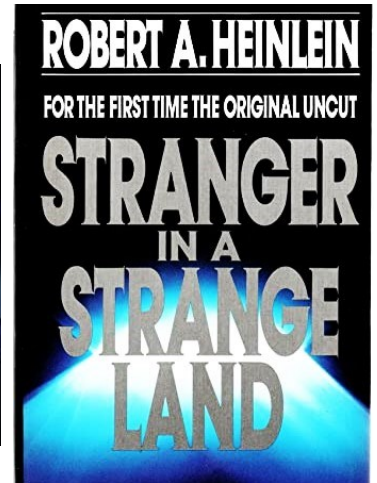

Soros captured the Lame Stream Media and most of social media to shut down free speech. Wrong became right and men could get pregnant. Elon Musk entered the battle. The key was Twitter and Elon paid a ridiculous amount of money to take control. Podcasts like Joe Rogan now had a bullet proof outlet for frank (sic) discussion of what the hell was going on.

Soros had diluted his support among obvious idiots to create chaos. Elon focused his effort on support of Trump for the kill shot that would nullify everything Soros had done in the past.

Historians are going to scratch their heads for decades trying to figure out what happened. Common sense will finally prevail and the American ideas the founders presented in our Constitution and Bill of Rights will finally be recognized...again...as the reason for America's success.

Thomas Jefferson would not sign the Constitution unless the Bill of Rights was adopted. Notice that free speech is the first amendment...and the second amendment guarantees that the first is protected. Makes you wonder what this election would have been if the Democrats had used the 25th amendment.

Trump might have had some competition?

Book Report

This was the book I was "grokking" last week. It's an interesting noun, verb, adjective and pure Martian word throughout the book. First published in 1961, with about 160k words, this uncut version was published in 1991 after his widow, Virginia, renewed the copyright. It has 220,000 words. Hard to explain why it became so popular but it's a book that had me from the first paragraph. To provide a hint at what you'll find, Elon Musk has a feature on his X website called GROK that will provide some of the most hilarious answers to even weird questions.

My kindle Fire Tablet locked and would not download books. Over 300 books on it and confirmed my preference for hard copies. Mysteriously came alive and asked me to register which I did when I bought it several years ago. They owe me a drink!

Don't die a virgin. Terrorists are up there waiting for you.

Listen to your body?
My body: "you're old and you need coffee".

Very few politicians are arrested because stupidity isn't a crime?

I have two moods:
1. annoyed
2. annoying

(You're welcome)

There are some people I meet that I just know I want to spend the rest of my life without them.

Baby oil?
Where does it come from and what do you use it for?

My best advice is usually hidden in my sarcasm.

When the moon hits your eye and it's 4:35, that's November.

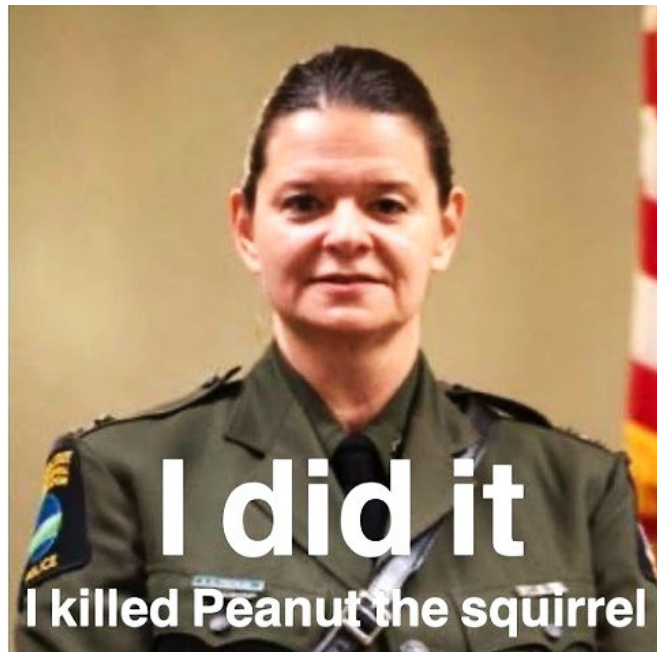

I don't need glasses. I can drink right out of the bottle.

Tip: Do not sit on the floor without a plan on how to get back up.

I solemnly promise to respect your wrong opinion.

Years of practice.

Democrats want to cancel the Electoral College until they get a football team?

Karen (ironically) is the NY bureaucrat who ordered the raid on a home where a pet squirrel and racoon have lived for seven years. She gets $220k for this job and may need every cent after the lawsuit hits. To recap...raided a home, took possession of two "illegal" small wild animals and killed them. But the same Gov. welcomes "illegal" people, houses them, feeds them, educates them, transports them, heals them, and tries to make them citizens and doesn't check them for diseases, doesn't vax them, doesn't spay or neuter them.

This story hit me hard. I rescued an Arctic Fox from a fur farm. He became a cherished member of our family.

C.L. Booger (cute little) was with us for seven years. He fit right in with the dogs, cats and even a goat. He even had a favorite with our five kids.

Peanut's legacy will live on with a spotlight on what govt is capable of. You'll find more about Peanut on social media. I'm sure he'll be well remembered in the lawsuits to come.

Tidbits

(a small and particularly interesting item of gossip or information)

Job numbers just before the election. LOSS of 28,000 in private sector while govt jobs grew 40,000.

The linemen restoring power in North Carolina have not been paid for eight weeks...by FEMA.

80 degrees in MN then 37 degrees and snow three days later on Halloween. Trump's fault?

U.S. officials in most European power centers have ditched the usual festivities. Embassies from Brussels to London, Paris and Berlin have decided against holding their usual watch parties.

Google showed a 'Where to Vote' section with a map for Kamala Harris, but not for Donald Trump.

Major news outlets were denied access to former President Donald Trump's election night watch party on Tuesday after they allegedly "pissed off" the Trump campaign with their coverage.
