

Recipe Corner

Inch thick pork shop marinated in Italian salad dressing 2-3 hours then baked. The potato gets full blast in microwave for five minutes and then into the oven at 350 for about an hour; butter, chopped sweet onion and sour cream after you split it open. For the potato, slit lengthwise then two or three slits across. Coat with olive oil and sprinkle kosher (coarse) salt before baking. Precede with a tossed salad topped with my homemade blue cheese dressing. One of my homemade rolls, of course. I'm showing bottled water in this picture but you guys know me better than that. Yeah...I'm having lots of fun in my kitchen and with my new microwave and gas stove! Also destroys the stereotype of the bachelor and Ramen noodles.

THE FRANK REPORT

*All the news I see fit to print.
Freedom of the press belongs to those who own one.*

Attorney General William Barr released the findings of the Mueller investigation in a four-page summary on March 24. According to Barr, Mueller's office interviewed approximately 500 witnesses, executed almost 500 search warrants, issued more 2,800 subpoenas, obtained more than 230 orders for communications records, and issued nearly 50 pen orders. Mueller employed a staff of 19 lawyers and 40 FBI agents, analysts, forensic accountants, and professional staff. Based on spending numbers through September 2018, Mueller's investigation cost American taxpayers $50,230 per day...five-hundred-thirty-three thousand articles published on Trump-Russia collusion in the Drive-By Media the past two years, the networks have devoted 2,284 minutes on the probe...and the cost of the Mueller investigation? More than $25 million.

My kids will relate to this cartoon...Roselee followed through on her threats. Five kids in a station wagon and she knew which one started it...one of them had to walk home the last mile. One of the many anecdotes I've just heard about given enough liquid refreshment to jog their memories. I also have some pictures.

Book Report

New author with a time travel murder mystery that's very believable. Set in Boston, also a good travelogue.

My fourth recent Gross (the author not an adjective) historical novel set in NY focused on the garment industry. Gross used his grandfather's history for the plot including Thomas Dewey and a host of actual mob bad guys.

Read Thomas Perry's new one: The Burglar. Don't bother...it's bad.

The Washington Post and The New York Times both won Pulitzer Prizes for reporting that bolstered the narrative that Trump and his associates committed treason by working with a foreign government to win an election. The two outlets shared a joint award from the Pulitzer board for national reporting. Look up the “reporter” the award is named for and how he got Woodrow Wilson elected which resulted in the 17th amendment and a dysfunctional Senate.

BTW: the more observant of you will notice that the Pulitzer Prize pictured above is for fiction...seems fitting?

← Looks like the conservatives own at least one restaurant I wouldn't be thrown out of for wearing a MAGA hat. I bet the sign will be defaced by one of those tolerant Democrats.

I'm going to track down the idiot who authored this federal law. Gov't gives me weapons, trains me how to use them, then threatens me with court martial if I lose them. If it's a concealed weapon, how they going to find it? VA police going to confiscate? How they going to find them without a search warrant. Just another example of feel good law making that has no resemblance to reality. Mentioned this to one of the care givers...she said: "If you think that's stupid, you should see some of the regulations we've received during Obama admin."

Roselee and the kids often smiled at what they call my “windmills”. I spent five years as a SCORE counselor (designated as such by the Small Business Administration) and provided seminars on the subject of customer service. When I find obnoxious examples of bad customer service, it's a knee jerk reflex thing for me to respond. Even if I don't win, it gives me some satisfaction that they had to acknowledge the problem. Sort of like repairing computers; take your left shoe off and smack the computer on the right side. won't fix it, but you'll feel better!

Here's my latest windmill:

After a few years of excellent service from Frontier at in Pinetop, AZ, I made the decision to try their service at my current location. The internet connection was expected to be at least 5mps of the promised 18mps to enable streaming using a ROKU connection. The service continued to deteriorate and the best I could usually find was 3mps and dropped connections. I contacted Frontier to cancel the service as of October 20, 2018 and was informed to make the final billing on a prorated cost and mark the check as final billing.

I continued to receive billing statements. Phone calls to Frontier indicated that the billing service would eventually catch up with the cancel notice...but never did. I have now received a credit collection notice for their service beyond the final billing date....here we go!

The president of Frontier, the MN commissioner at the Dept of Commerce and the president of the credit collection company are now receiving documentation of the paid bill...and an invoice for my time calculated at my client billing rates. I sent the invoice to the local Frontier store because that involves small claims court because it would be classified as a local business. The invoice includes storage charges for the modems left behind by the Frontier techs when they tried fixing the problem. I even included an internet connection log showing the discrepancy between Frontier and Spectrum service (3mps vs 200mps). Yes...I'm enjoying this!
