

Recipe Corner
Moose Stew

Great to know someone who shot a Moose (thanks Tammy!). Crockpot gets diced onion and garlic bits. Then, fry the Moose in bite size pieces in more onion and garlic. Into the crockpot followed by chopped carrots, celery and those small whole potatoes. Top with can of diced, with juice, tomatoes. On low until done, about 4-6 hours.
Tip: I marinate the Moose in orange juice for about an hour. Makes it tender.

I've done goose but this is the first Moose. Also have recipes for pheasant, quail, squirrel, duck and rabbit. Daughter is into genealogy and tells me my grandparents immigrated from Canada where they were fur traders. I remember, as a kid, Grandma paying us a nickel for rabbits...she made hats and gloves from the fur. Pre-teen kids roaming the neighborhood with .22 rifles never raised an eyebrow.

Top Secret Service agents plan to retire ahead of damning report revealing massive security failures during Butler Trump assassination attempt. "I think the American people are going to be shocked, astonished, and appalled by what we will report to them about the failures by the Secret Service in this assassination attempt on the former president," Dem Senator Richard (Danang Dick) Blumenthal said.

Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis Announces Executive Order Assigning Attempted Assassination Case to Office of Statewide Prosecutor 'It is Not in Best Interest to Have Same Federal Agencies Seeking to Prosecute Donald Trump Leading This Investigation'. DeSantis posted on X, "The State of Florida will be conducting its own investigation regarding the attempted assassination at Trump International Golf Club." "The people deserve the truth about the would-be assassin and how he was able to get within 500 yards of the former president." (the addendum to this issue of the newsletter spells it out loud and clear.)

Anybody notice how quiet these two have become?

Lame Stream Media

More than 1,000 people, including Hezbollah fighters and medics, were injured across Lebanon after a series of explosions involving communication pagers used by Hezbollah. The explosions, which occurred in various parts of the country, have been described as one of the largest security breaches Hezbollah has faced in the ongoing conflict with Israel. The detonations took place as Hezbollah and Israel have been engaged in cross-border warfare since the Gaza conflict erupted in October.

Tensions have been steadily rising between the Iran-backed Hezbollah and Israeli forces, leading to ongoing clashes and casualties on both sides.

The cause of the pager explosions remains unclear, though Hezbollah has pointed fingers at Israel. The pagers, which were distributed to Hezbollah members in recent months, exploded simultaneously across several regions, including Beirut's southern suburbs, a stronghold of the group.

Hezbollah official said the detonation of the pagers marked the group's "biggest security breach" since the conflict with Israel intensified. He accused Israel of orchestrating the attack, citing the fact that the devices exploded simultaneously in different parts of the country. The official also noted that the new pagers, which were equipped with lithium batteries, appeared to have been tampered with before being distributed to Hezbollah fighters.

A second wave of blasts rocked Hezbollah the next day as thousands of radios and other devices used by the terror group were detonated across Lebanon. These devices were ordered from the same terrorist group as the first devices.

Wonder if they had the extended warranties?

If I was Hezbollah and realized the engineering genius coupled with infinite planning Israel demonstrated, I would migrate to even Chicago as soon as possible!
