

"Spam PACs" and gullible grannies. Money in politics is taking a sinister turn. A Stanford professor studied how unscrupulous political funders are targeting senior citizens with apocalyptic come-ons to raise money for themselves and their candidates. An article he wrote detailing those findings went through eight months of fact-checking and legal review by the New York Slimes before the Democrat-aligned Elias Law Firm intimidated them against publishing it.

As I mentioned previously, the Democrats are using Spam Pacs for their campaigns. Locally, in MN Congressional District 2, Matt Little has raised over $900K but only has about $128K on hand. His opponent, Eric Pratt raised $500K and has $255K cash on hand. When a SPAM Pac eats up 90% of your income, it might reflect "normal" Democrat financial acumen? Someone should whisper in Matt's ear not to waste the rest on lottery tickets.

What would be absolutely hilarious is if a Republican owned the SPAM Pac business. If that was discovered, Democrats would scream dirty politics while firing the political pundits who didn't come up with the idea. Better...it was a project from one of the Somalian Learning Daycares!

The Department of Homeland Security is planning a surge in its efforts to investigate voter fraud in select states. DHS has pushed states to share their voter rolls for audit and has vowed to withhold grant funding from those that refuse to adopt a broader set of election reforms.

Offices in nine states are expected to take investigative action from early September to mid-October, according to the guidance. Those states include Washington, Wisconsin, Missouri, Georgia, California, Pennsylvania, Nevada, New York and Connecticut. An audit of public voter rolls had identified more than 250,000 registered noncitizens in just four states: California, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Nevada.

California currently provides an option to register to vote while simply checking boxes that say you do not have an ID or Social Security number. About 463,000 have done so.

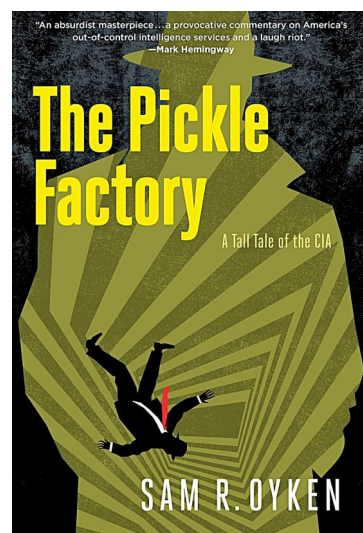

A Republican-backed proposal in California to create new voter identification requirements and citizenship audits is set to appear on the ballot in November, part of a nationwide G.O.P. push to tighten voting laws. The proposal would require voters to bring identification to the polls and provide an ID number when voting by mail. It would also require local officials to regularly check voter rolls to help ensure that only U.S. citizens are registered. They should have done this before?

Book Report

This is an hilarious account of how the CIA "works". If you've ever read Catch 22 (or saw the movie) this book is more than its rival. Think Woody Harrelson as James Bond. The takeaway is to hope The Pickle Factory actually exists and the CIA is not aware that it does. With a sprawling narrative, it even includes the fact that T.S. Eliot published The Tribute To Bullshit as the first public acknowledgment of the term. Don't miss this one.

This must be one of the little lambs who benefitted from Dolly Parton's Imagination Library. She started it in 1995 for the children within her home county. Today, her program spans five countries and sends millions of free books each month to children around the world...five million books to the UK alone. Wonder if she included The Art of The Deal?

Bet Donald would donate copies and even pay postage.

You may not have heard about this one:

The Justice Department is preparing to activate a long dormant maritime war court to streamline military capture of Iranian oil tankers as US prizes, according to three people familiar with the plans. Reviving prize courts, which is expected to face legal challenges, is intended to strengthen the blockade of Iran and offset the cost of the conflict.

Then there is this about stopping election fraud:

In 1827, the Supreme Court settled a question most Americans have never thought to ask:

Who decides when America is in a state of "insurrection"?

Their answer: the authority "belongs exclusively to the President." And his decision is "conclusive."

In other words...We don't need a vote from Congress. Or a sign-off from a judge. One man – Donald Trump – could over-rule every other branch of government including the all-powerful "Deep State."

Here's an interesting anecdote from Scott Bessent:

"Iran reminds me of when I was a kid in South Carolina. We lived near a swamp... we ended up with a lot of poison[ous] snakes in our yard... You'd cut the head off — but the tail kept wiggling and you had to bury the head of the snake because the head of the snake was still poisonous and there is venom there."

"We are burying the head of the Iranian snake. The snake doesn't know it's dead yet but it will stop wiggling when the sun goes down."

National Security Experts Sound Alarm After X Uncovers Chinese Bot Farm Targeting the U.S. Data Center/AI Debate. "These posts contained claims that AI data centers are driving up household electricity prices and straining the grid." They added that other posts "included AI-generated cartoons that depicted data-center operators enriching themselves at the public's expense." Try this...do a search on how many data centers already exist in the US compared to rest of the world. You'll find some amazing numbers.
